	Breakout A	Breakout B
1:30 pm – 2:30 pm	Session 2 – What's that App? - Cindy Cousins, IT Applications Director, North Carolina Department of Public Safety This session will address the increasing demand for mobility. As agencies plan their own mobile apps or Web portals, they often find themselves with more questions than answers. Mobile apps promise to provide timely information and save time and money. One lesson governments have learned is that creating a nice-looking, easy-to-use app is not enough. These apps must seamlessly integrate into the agency's back-end systems. Many agencies that are interested in mobility struggle with where to start and how to bridge the gap between where they are and where they are going.	Session 3 – GRA Exchange Implementation in Maine—Sending RMS Data to Prosecutors and N-DEx- Glenda Winn, Systems Analyst, Maine State Police; Tamara Getchell, Business and Communications Coordinator, District Attorney's Office, Cumberland County This session will present a case study of how the Maine State Police and Maine District Attorneys implemented a shared information exchange of local law enforcement incident data to support case referrals to the DAs and submit incident data to N-DEx.

2:45 pm – 3:45 pm	Vendor Exhibits (New Hampshire)	Session 4 – Implementing Statewide Master Charge Codes or Offense Tables - Steve Prisoc - Judiciary CIO, NM; Brenda Ray - Section Chief - District Attorney IT, WI; Dave Naisby - Executive Director, Office of Admin., PA; Pam Schafer - CJIS Director, ND; Ron Weight - UPC IT Director, UT In today's justice community many agencies are striving to communicate electronically. One of the difficulties of doing this is finding a way to map the offense or charge codes from all of the diverse applications when few, if any, of them use the same classification or structure for storing those offenses in their data systems. A master charge code service that is available to, and used by all justice agencies and systems may be the intermediary needed to make this difficult process of mapping disparate systems possible. This session will discuss the efforts made in a couple of states along with some lessons learned and some ideas of how to get started. Session 5 – SAVIN IEPD - MT Pilot - John Daugherty, Chief Information Officer - Administrator, Montana Department of Corrections; Joan Eliel, Program Specialist, Montana Dept. of Justice, Office of Consumer Protection and Victim Services In 2010, the Bureau of Justice Assistance sought project proposals for the purpose of creating a national standard that states could use to share relevant offender information with victims and entities throughout the criminal justice system. The focus of the project is to develop a SAVIN information exchange standard (IEPD, or Information Exchange Package Documentation), based on the National Information Exchange Model (NIEM) to automate and improve the sharing of offender data across systems. Montana was selected as the pilot site. This session will discuss the development of the IEPD and implementation phases from key technologist and business practice management on the project.
3:45 pm – 4:45 pm		Session 6 – eEverything- The Good, The Bad, and The Ugly - Steve Prisoc, CIO New Mexico Judiciary While paperless courts have long been a goal, those jurisdictions that have actually implemented paperless methods have had mixed results with acceptance of all digital schedules, court records and documents. This session will explore the keys to designing an effective and manageable solution.
5:15pm		Networking Outing: Enjoy a guided bus tour to Topsham, Maine for a lobster bake at SeaDogs Brewing Company. The brewery has a full line of award-winning handcrafted ales that capture the spirit of Maine's sea-faring history. The site occupies a scenic spot on the Androscoggin River.
